Human skin owes its color to the ① presence of particles known as melanin. The primary function of melanin is to ② protect the upper levels of the skin from being damaged by the sun's ultraviolet rays. This radiation poses a critical problem for our kind because we lack the dense coat of hair that acts as a sunscreen for most mammals. Hairlessness exposes us to two kinds of radiation ③ dangers: ordinary sunburn and skin cancers. Melanin is the body's first line of defense against these afflictions. The more melanin particles, the darker the skin, and the ④ higher the risk of sunburn and all forms of skin cancer. This explains why the highest rates for skin cancer are found in sun-drenched lands such as Australia, where light-skinned people of European descent spend a good part of their lives ⑤ outdoors wearing scanty clothes. *scanty (뜻이) 몸을 가린 듯 만 듯한

Two psychologists, Dan Kindlon and Michael Thompson, who wrote together a book entitled Raising Cain, argue that America, as a society, has so ① mishandled the emotional lives of boys that it has produced many distant and troubled men. Fathers and mothers, male and female teachers alike, all unconsciously conspire, the authors suggest, to ② limit the emotional development of boys. As they put it, we want our boys to be “tough” and “strong” based on images of ③ manliness we absorbed from our culture. So when a child is hurting, when he's sad, angry, frustrated, disappointed, or frightened, we don't ④ allow him to learn about what he's feeling. We push him back inside himself with comments like “Just tough it out” or “You need to be strong.” As a result, boys ⑤ possess “emotional literacy,” the ability to express their own feelings and understand emotions in others. *conspire 공모하다
